

JCST Article Brings In Awards

In June, the Association of Educational Publishers (AEP), located in New Jersey, and the Society of National Association Publications (SNAP), located in Washington, D.C., recognized one of the Journal of College Science Teaching's feature articles at their annual competitions. AEP selected the article, titled "Copyrights and the Educator" (October 2000, pp. 100-105), which discusses copyright issues teachers face in the classroom, as a finalist in its print publications feature article category, and SNAP honored the same article with a bronze award in its scholarly journals feature article category.

JCST congratulates authors Eric J. Simon of Fordham University and Kurt M. Saunders of California State University, Northridge, for garnering two such prestigious awards from the educational publishing field.

Coauthors Eric Simon (left) and Kurt Saunders, with Claudia Link, managing editor of JCST, posing with their distinguished achievement certificate. The authors accepted the award at the Association of Educational Publishers banquet on June 8, 2001, held at the National Press Club in Washington, D.C.